Wednesday, April the first 2020.

Here we are the fourth month of this new decade and at the beginning of the year, who would have thought we'd be in this situation? The whole world is in a situation and we're all breathing the same air. We're in this together, and we'll get out of it together. So COVID-19 Huh. Well, we faced other things before and we're facing this one now, seems to be pretty bad and people are starting to realize that Yeah, social distancing just may help. Washing hands definitely does. We're taken care. Some businesses are closed and some departments are closed to the public, but are still maintaining basic operations to keep the society moving.

Tribal government and emergency services are keeping people updated. The clinic is continuing serving the public. Some social services have less activities going but they're still providing some services. The basic needs, the store is open and I admire the the work that these people are doing. They're there paying attention. They're keeping track of how many people are in the store at one time and making sure that people at least use the hand sanitizers before they go in and protecting the people in the public before and after they leave.

So we're taking the precautions that need to be taken, and we'll get through this. Wish you well. Stay healthy. Go for a walk at least a mile a day. Breathe some fresh air. Open the windows, open the doors, air out the house, drink plenty of water. Take care. Thanks for listening.
